

The Analytical Translation of Biomarkers from Bench to Bedside

Professor Donald Jones

Professor in Translation Biomarkers,
Leicester Cancer Research Centre

The translation of biomarkers to the clinic is important to transform clinical science and patient management and will play a critical part in the fields of stratified and precision medicine. Hear about some of the latest research emanating from the John and Lucille van Geest laboratory which has transformed every aspect of the discovery process and resulted in a platform which is leading to meaningful discovery and validation of biomarkers.
