PLAGIARISM

Every piece of coursework should normally include a bibliography of the sources you have used. Any quotations must be enclosed in quotation marks, with the source indicated (preferably in a footnote). For further guidance see the American Studies Handbook. Except for acknowledged quotations, work MUST be written in your own words. The copying of passages from other people's work without acknowledgement, even if slightly paraphrased by altering occasional words or phrases, constitutes plagiarism and is absolutely forbidden: presenting other people's work as your own is dishonest and WILL BE SEVERELY PENALISED. Likely penalties are detailed in the American Studies Student Handbook. If you are at all uncertain as to what constitutes plagiarism, you should seek advice from your tutor. Your work may be screened for plagiarism by a computerised screening tool.

DECLARATION I confirm that this coursework is my own work, is not copied from any other person's work (published or unpublished), and has not previously been submitted for assessment.
