

Postgraduate Student Masterclass

“Approaches to Empire”, Professor Antoinette Burton, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign.

10 December 2018 2-4pm
Ken Edwards Fifth Floor SR 526

Antoinette Burton’s work has been central to the development of the field known as new imperial history. Author of numerous books, edited collections and articles, Antoinette will lead a session in which students will explore different approaches to the study of Empire. MA and PhD students from History, English, and adjacent disciplines in the arts and humanities and social sciences, will deepen their understanding of the ways in which historians have researched and represented British colonies, and the relationship between Britain and its imperial world. This masterclass is free and is open to all postgraduate students.

To register please contact Kellie Moss – km345@le.ac.uk - by 3 December.

Note that participating students will be asked to read three extracts from Antoinette’s work in preparation for the masterclass. These will be emailed as PDFs on registration.
