Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:

- Students will demonstrate academic integrity in their submitted work through appropriate use of academic citation and referencing conventions in their discipline (for example in directly quoting or paraphrasing the work of others).
- Analyse the role of a range of rhetorical devices and deploy these in their own writing
- Analyse features of discourse across text genres
- Critically assess academic writing conventions
- Compose a discourse analysis of academic texts

Teaching and Learning Methods

Each week students will attend:

- A two hour session with language development and content input
- A one hour seminar

Blackboard content:

- Academic writing tutorial
- Module documents
- A selection of web links related to the module content
- Electronic reading list

Reading List:

- Primary texts (set texts - main reading)
- Secondary texts (suggestions for further critical reading)
- Reference texts (titles on academic reading and writing)

Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:
- Identify, explain and enact the use of rhetorical strategies and rhetorical devices
- Create and sustain a well-reasoned argument in written and spoken discourse
- Conduct a rhetorical analysis of spoken discourse
- Prepare and deliver a scholarly presentation in collaboration with peers that demonstrates an understanding of concepts covered in the Module

Teaching and Learning Methods

Input (1 hour) sessions focus on raising theoretical awareness of rhetoric and associated rhetorical concepts to develop an understanding of rhetoric in academic contexts. Students are required to prepare in advance for input sessions by completing required reading and other study tasks.

Practical sessions (2 hours) are designed to combine theory with practical application. Students should expect to be actively involved in the classroom, in individual, pair and group activities. This will allow students to develop and refine their engagement in scholarly discourse.

Note that the assessed presentation involves groupwork.

Assessment Methods

The module is assessed through a combination of coursework (written assignment) and an oral exam (presentation).

Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion, of the module students should be able to:

- Writing: Produce a range of text types taking into account genre, register, and intended readership. Use appropriate language to execute a range of functions, e.g., evaluating, summarising, persuading.
- Reading: Extract gist, main ideas, and detail from a range of text types. Identify the purpose, style, and intended readership of a text. Identify the attitude, opinions, and tone of the writer. Demonstrate understanding of text structure and organisation.
- Listening: Extract gist, main ideas, and specific information from a range of text types. Identify the purpose, outcome and context of a text. Identify the attitudes, opinions, and feelings of the speaker.
- Speaking: Use appropriate language to execute a range of functions, e.g., exchanging ideas, expressing and justifying opinions, and negotiating an outcome. Use phonological features to accurately convey meaning. Use a range of cohesive devices and discourse markers to organise speech.
- Grammar and vocabulary: Demonstrate control of a range of grammatical structures and lexis appropriate to C1 level. Use a range of lexis appropriate to C1 level.

Teaching and Learning Methods

The module is based on a published coursebook, which students are required to purchase. Additional materials tailored to the needs of the students are supplied by the tutor.

The classes make extensive use of pair and group work, and students can expect to play an active role.

Students who wish to take the CAE exam in addition to the module assessments can arrange to do this through the English Language Teaching Unit. Any eventual score gained in the CAE will have no effect on a student's module marks.

Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:
- Describe segmental and suprasegmental features of English pronunciation
- Analyse segmental and suprasegmental features of English pronunciation
- Compare and contrast L1 segmental and suprasegmental features with English segmental and suprasegmental features
- Identify a personal pronunciation goal drawing on the relevant literature and work towards achieving that goal
- Demonstrate an understanding of how to work towards achieving a personal pronunciation goal
- Demonstrate an understanding of the phonemic chart to support learning
- Demonstrate an understanding of appropriate terminology to support learning

Teaching and Learning Methods

Theory (1 hour) sessions focus on raising theoretical awareness as well as knowledge of appropriate terminology. Students are required to prepare in advance for these sessions by completing the required reading and other study tasks.

Practical sessions (2 hours) are designed to combine theory with practical application. Students should expect to be actively involved in the classroom, in individual, pair and group activities, allowing the opportunity for feedback on their progress towards their pronunciation goal.

This module is introductory in nature and therefore assumes no prior knowledge of English phonology or phonemic script.

Assessment Methods

Students are assessed through a combination of coursework and a written examination.

Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:

- Use appropriate strategies to record and learn vocabulary so that they can expand the range of vocabulary they use.
- Distinguish near-synonyms by comparing collocation, connotation and word grammar.
- Apply lexical approaches to chunking language.
- Investigate vocabulary for their own academic field in order to improve their ability to communicate in their discipline.
- Use dictionaries, corpora, concordancers, the Academic Word List and other resources effectively in order to prioritise high-frequency vocabulary, and to use vocabulary more accurately.

Teaching and Learning Methods

Input sessions (1 hour per week) focus on theoretical awareness and knowledge of metalanguage. Students are required to prepare for input sessions by completing required reading and other study tasks.

Practical sessions (2 hours) combine theory with practical application, including the use of tools for vocabulary analysis and learning.

Students can expect to be actively involved in the classroom, with individual, pair and group activities.

Assessment Methods

Students are assessed through a combination of coursework and a written examination.

Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:

- Critically evaluate traditional, prescriptive grammar rules by testing their validity against examples of authentic English
- Explore the relationship between grammar (syntax) and meaning (semantics) by identifying distinct features of different genres
- Account for the grammatical choices made by proficient users of the language
- Analyse some of the larger grammatical building blocks of the language, such as noun phrases and participle clauses, and deploy these appropriately in their own writing
- Identify relationships between grammatical structures and punctuation in writing, and apply this knowledge to their own writing

Teaching and Learning Methods

The classes use individual, pair, small group and whole group activities and discussion in response to examples of spoken and written discourse and input from the tutor, with analysis and theory leading towards practice. Students are encouraged to work collaboratively to make sense of the texts which they encounter during the module, to share their existing knowledge of the grammatical rules underlying the language, and, where necessary, to reconcile these preconceptions with the reality of authentic language use. The module will suit students who are naturally curious about the language which they meet, and who enjoy taking an analytical approach to language.

Assessment Methods

Students are assessed through a combination of coursework and a final written exam.

Intended Learning Outcomes
As a result of this module, students should be able to:

- Apply ESOL teaching and learning pedagogy
- Utilise basic ESOL teaching tools and techniques
- Demonstrate an understanding of how language and language skills can be presented and practised
- Plan a language lesson on sound pedagogical principles
- Create ESOL materials

Teaching and Learning Methods
The methodology of the module follows the communicative approach; that is, students will 'learn through doing'. The module is practical in nature and the classes make extensive use of pair and small group activities and discussion. Students will be involved in hands-on tasks such as creating materials for listening texts and also in pair peer teaching (where they will teach their colleagues).

One of the techniques used during the module is 'loop teaching', where students will participate in an activity as learners and then be invited to critique the task from a teacher's perspective. This exemplifies the practical nature of the module and the need for active involvement in all activities.

Total Module Hours 100

Intended Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:
- Demonstrate an ability to express complex ideas and concepts in written English with accuracy and fluency
- Discuss texts following the academic conventions in the field of literary studies, using appropriate metalanguage
- Analyse literary works, applying knowledge of the generic features of Romantic poetry and prose and exploring specific features of the authors and works in the syllabus
- Make meaningful connections between literature and other media, especially film, by evaluating interpretations of an original work
- React to and interpret literary works adopting a clear line of criticism, such as Feminist, Psychoanalytic and Marxist criticism

Teaching and Learning Methods

The syllabus of this module focuses on the Romantics and their influence on other literary genres, art forms, and contemporary popular culture.

In the first week, students will submit a formative assignment of 500 words on a generic topic in the field of English Studies.

Each week students will attend:
- A two hour session with language practice and content input (lecture)
- A one hour seminar (group discussion)
- Besides the language and literature focus, content related to the development of academic skills will also be covered in both weekly sessions.

Assessment Methods

The module is assessed by two pieces of written coursework:

1) A review of a theatrical or film adaptation of a literary work, evaluating it in the light of the original text.
2) An essay which demonstrates an understanding of the genres, generic features and/or specific texts covered on the module.

In the first week, students will also submit a formative assignment of 500 words on a generic topic in the field of English Studies.

Pre-Requisites

This module is only open to non-native speakers of English. Students should have a level of English equivalent to C1 in the Common European Framework of Reference (CEFR C1).

Excluded Combinations
None.

Guided Independent Learning: Indicative Activities
Web search: students are required to use the web links available on Blackboard and conduct some independent web search on particular aspects of the literary work to be studied in the following session, such as setting, plot summary, characters, historical background and possible film adaptations. Such information will be shared in the seminar discussion.

Article/chapter reading: every other lesson students are given a list of three critical papers on the literary text they are currently studying; they should download and read the paper of their choice as preparation for the seminar discussion.

Independent reading: besides the suggestions for secondary reading provided in the reading list, students will need to conduct independent library research in order to write their assignments.
On successful completion of the module, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate an ability to express complex ideas and concepts in written English with accuracy and fluency
