

PETER AUGER is a doctoral student at Merton College, Oxford. His thesis is called ‘British Responses to Du Bartas’s Semaines, 1584–1641’.

JENNIFER COLE is a first-year DPhil candidate at the University of Oxford. Her research interests include science in modernism, the interactions between highbrow literature and popular culture, and early twentieth-century American periodicals.

YUN-HUA HSIAO is an assistant professor at the Department of English, National Changhua University of Education in Taiwan. She received her PhD in English Literature from the University of Newcastle. Dr. Hsiao’s current interests include British Chinese writing, Asian American literature, and cultural and feminist studies.

NIMMI JAYATHURAI holds a PhD in English Literature from the University of Houston, focusing on marginalized immigrant identities in the Asian Pacific. She recently finished writing for the Writing and C/Siting Houston Project, in collaboration with Houston Arts Alliance, the University of Houston Folklore Archive, and the Rice Design Alliance, and funded by a Humanities Texas Grant. Her research interests include margins, postcolonial fiction in the Asian Pacific, and Chaucer. She has published in the International Journal for the Practice and Theory of Creative Writing.

MICHAEL J. MARTIN is an Associate Professor of English at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, Texas, where he teaches courses in Contemporary American Literature and Literary Theory. He has published and presented work concerning such issues as trauma and literature, the importance of Beat literature, and developments in American Road literature.

ALLEN MENDENHALL (B.A., M.A., J.D., LL.M., A.B.D.) is a staff attorney for the Supreme Court of Alabama and a doctoral candidate in English at Auburn University, Alabama.

AVISHEK PARUI is a PhD student at the Department of English Studies, Durham University, where he works on nervous conditions and masculinity crises in literary narratives from the fin de siècle to the post-modern, under the supervision of Prof. Patricia Waugh. He has had work published in the peer-reviewed journal Postgraduate English, and has a book chapter forthcoming in the edited volume Modernism and Film.

EUGENIA RUSSELL obtained her PhD in Byzantine Studies in 2009 from Royal Holloway, University of London, where she currently teaches History and Political Philosophy. She is the author of Literature and Culture in Late Byzantine Thessalonica (2013, forthcoming), and St Demetrius of Thessalonica: Cult and Devotion in the Middle Ages (2010), and is the editor of Spirituality in Late Byzantium (2009). She has also contributed to the journals Renaissance Studies and Byzantion.