In a crowded market place, branding is more important than ever. When a prospective student looks through 50 prospectuses and a hundred websites, they will all start to blur into one. Effective branding helps the University of Leicester material – online and in print – to stand out among our competitors (who are also all trying to stand out).

Branding also provides consistency. It is important that all University of Leicester material looks like it originates from the same place. Properly branded material benefits from – and enhances – the University’s reputation.
The University’s brand includes several aspects and elements including:

- The logo
- The crest
- Fonts
- Colours
- The ‘L’s
- The ‘UOL’ device
- and other elements of design, including the sub-branding we are using for our centenary.

These branding guidelines applies to everything we produce for an external audience including:

- Brochures
- Leaflets
- Posters
- Postcards
- Social media
- Websites
- Banners
- Powerpoints
THE HERALDIC CREST

The Heraldic Crest

The crest is used very sparingly and always in a dignified way. It’s not the logo. Check with ERD before using it.

It is usually reproduced in grey pantone 431. It can also be used as a watermark behind text.

The Logo

The logo has three versions:
- Full colour (grey and red)
- Single colour
- Inverse

The most important thing about the logo is that it includes the shield and the name together and so must always be used complete: the shield cannot be used on its own. The logo should never be stretched, squeezed or distorted in any way.

We always put the logo top left on everything. Any additional logos, such as the SU or Team Leicester, normally sit bottom left.
The logo is not to be reproduced smaller than 35mm in size.

The total width of the logo should never be less than 35mm.

The area around the logo must be clear of text and other graphics.

Full-Colour

Mono

Inverse

Exclusion Zone

The monochrome version of the logo is normally black. It is also available in grey, gold or silver, but check with ERD before using those colours. No other colours are available or allowed.

If the background is a solid, dark colour, you can use the inverse logo, which is available in white, gold or silver.
CENTENARY
100 YEARS DEVICE

Over the next three years, this centenary logo will be widely used across all our material. It is available in three variants:

- Gold on gold
- Gold on black
- Gold with no background

We have two fonts: Frutiger and Adobe Caslon. Frutiger is our sans serif font, used for campaign material. Adobe Caslon is our serif font, used for the body text in brochures, leaflets, reports etc. If you use this for headings, it must be in ALL CAPS. (If you are using a system that does not have Frutiger or Adobe Caslon, use Arial and Times instead.)

COLOUR PALETTE

Most of our material uses the red and grey corporate colours. We have four other colours and two metallics that can also be used. No other colours should be used for text, blocks or backgrounds.
These are rankings and awards we have received. They can be included on printed material, using these graphics. The asterisks and footnotes are mandatory, for legal reasons.

You don’t have to use all of them on everything. ERD will keep the graphics up-to-date as our rankings change.

Most of our material uses red as the base colour (see ‘Colour palette’). We sometimes use gradients and other effects to enhance the design.
GLOWING

We try to use glowing imagery where appropriate, as these examples demonstrate.
MORE GLOWING

We have a bank of approved ‘glow’ effects which can be used. This ties into the ‘space’ theme of our advertising.
THE ‘L’s

One of the most distinctive elements of our brand is the ‘L’s (sometimes called the ‘lock-up element’). These give a distinctive, consistent look to our marketing materials without getting in the way of the headings, text or imagery.
HOW THE ‘L’s WORK

The ‘L’s are used top-right and bottom-left as shown, framing the title or heading.

The title or heading can be left- or right-justified but must always be right-aligned on the page. It is usually in ALL CAPS.

On A4, A5 or 201x210 subject brochures, the title and ‘L’s will always be at the top of the design. On other documents, it may sometimes be lower down the design.
Here are some examples of how the title and ’L’s can be used in different ways on an A4 poster. Although it’s a simple design element, there are many different ways it can be used.

We are hosting a month of events to celebrate black history, arts and culture this October. Full list of events: www.le.ac.uk/black-history
The overlapping ‘UOL’ device is used on material that is specifically aimed at current students. It should not be used on any external material.

The ‘UOL’ normally goes bottom left, either horizontally or rotated 90 degrees anticlockwise. It can be used in a wide variety of colours, or be translucent over imagery, or even use imagery within its shape.

You are invited to write an essay of not more than 10,000 words relating to the above topic. The winning entry will be awarded £250.

DEPARTMENTAL BROCHURES

These two examples demonstrate how our brochures can have a clearly identifiable shared branding while actually looking very different.

Both have the logo, title and 'L's at the top.

The main title is Adobe Caslon, the smaller title above is Frutiger. Both are ALL CAPS and both are right-aligned.
CAMPAIGN BROCHURES

There is more scope for variation among campaign brochures. Each stands on its own, rather than being part of a set like the departmental brochures.

These two examples show how the title and ‘L’s (but not the logo) can be in the middle of the page or even towards the bottom. There is also a choice of using Adobe Caslon (serif) or Frutiger (sans serif) for the title.
PULL-UP BANNERS

Pull-up banners (technically called ‘grasshoppers’) are 220 cm tall and 80 cm wide.

The heading and the ‘L’s always go near the top.

Departmental banners should have the heading in Adobe Caslon to match the brochures. Other banners can use Adobe Caslon or Frutiger as desired.

Banners work best when kept uncluttered, with text that can be read from a distance. Bear in mind that sometimes there may be a table in front of your banner!
ON-CAMPUS CAMPAIGNS

Here are some examples of how the branding guidelines allow variation while maintaining a consistent feel.
INVITATIONS

All invitations to official University of Leicester events use the same design and layout, incorporating a ‘glowing’ design from a bank of approved imagery.
All our student handbooks use the same design and layout, incorporating a geometric graphic from a bank of approved imagery.

The colour is always red or blue (see ‘Colour palette’).
TEMPORARY SIGNAGE

Signs directing people around campus (eg. during a conference) use Frutiger, our sans serif font, and this design of arrow.
POWERPOINT

It is important that Powerpoints, for both internal and external use, use the standard University of Leicester templates which can be found at www.le.ac.uk/powerpoint.

The fonts used are Times (serif) and Arial (sans serif) because Frutiger and Adobe Caslon are not available on Powerpoint.

The designs on the left are title templates and should only be used for your title slide. The title is in Times, the speaker name in Arial.

On the main slide templates, Times is used for the main heading, Arial is used for any subheading and the body text.
The School of Business has its own branding guidelines. These guidelines cannot be adapted to any other school or department.

- ULSB and UOL logo usage
- colour palette
- school of business graphic device
- colour application
- school of business examples
UoL/ULSB Logo
This is the one and only time that the UoL logo is combined with another element. As with the standard UoL logo, this cannot be split up, stretched, squeezed or re-arranged in any way. It is available in full colour (red and grey), black, grey or inverse.

ULSB logo
This is available in horizontal (4x1) or vertical (2x2) formats and can be used in a variety of colours.

Heraldic crest
The crest is sometimes combined with the ULSB logo to give it a sense of prestige.
THE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS COLOUR PALETTE

The ULSB colour palette uses the same corporate red as the main University colour palette but features some other colours. These can be used at any density down to 10%.

Custom .ase palette files are available for Adobe Creative Suite.
