LIIPS seminar – ‘There are benefits for team-based reflection following a patient death: But are we doing it right?’

6 July 2017

On the 6 July 2017 Professor Liz Anderson (Leicester Medical School) and Professor John Sandars (Edge Hill University) shared their findings following a scoping review for NHS Education for Scotland on the nature and benefits of team-based professional reflection after a patient death. The audience consisted of 25 members of staff and patient representatives from 5 local organisations.

If you would like a copy of the slides from the seminar please email LIIPS (liips@leicester.ac.uk).

If you would like to be involved in building on the discussion at the workshop, to create a tool to support team based reflection, please contact LIIPS (liips@leicester.ac.uk).

In addition, Professor Anderson is happy to work with anyone wishing to conduct research on current activities in this area. If you would like to know more please email LIIPS (liips@leicester.ac.uk).

‘Most useful aspect? ......Thinking about why one size doesn’t fit all and it needs to be individualised and is dependent on expected vs unexpected death’
Speaker Biographies

Professor Liz Anderson (Leicester Medical School)

After completing an extended nursing degree course at St Bartholomew’s Hospital London and consolidating her practice, Liz moved to Leicester to work as a Midwife and Health Visitor. Following her PhD she worked as a research Health Visitor before moving into Leicester Medical School to set up new teaching. She has been recognised as National Teaching Fellow for her innovative approaches to teaching, leading interprofessional education which seeks to improve outcomes for patients. She is patient safety lead for Leicester Medical School.

Professor John Sandars (Edge Hill University)

After training in hospital medicine, John entered general practice and was a GP trainer, GP postgraduate tutor, Macmillan GP Facilitator in Palliative Medicine and part-time lecturer in general practice at the University of Manchester. He was senior lecturer/associate professor at the Leeds Institute of Medical Education, University of Leeds and Professor in Medical Education at the University of Sheffield before moving to Edge Hill University in 2016.

Dr Dan Kinnair (Leicester Partnership Trust and Leicester Medical School)

Dan is a Consultant General Adult Psychiatrist who works on the Intensive Care Unit at the Bradgate Mental Health unit. He is one of the mental health block leads at the University of Leicester, and has worked in postgraduate medical education as Head of School of Psychiatry and as an Associate Postgraduate Dean.

Dan was unfortunately unable to present on the day due to illness.